Crack.GROOVESHOCK creator George Miller and Steve Zaillian, the Oscar-winning screenwriter of Schindler's

List, have just revealed the official title for their upcoming movie. Surprise? Yes, it's called Big Day, and it will star Andrew Garfield, Miles Teller, and Amy Schumer.

Garfield and Teller play siblings forced by parents to compete in a big-day-boy/girl-boy/girl beauty pageant.

Schumer makes her comedic breakthrough in this scripted venture as a 31-year-old virgin who falls in love with the pageant's host. In the meantime, Garfield's character struggles to find his voice while dealing with his strained relationship with his mother. Details on casting for the comedy, currently in production, are currently unknown. "Geoffrey Naufft is directing from a script by Zaillian and Miller," Miller said in a statement.

"We're so excited to have Steve Zaillian and Amy Schumer on board to make a film that they can also look back on fondly in a few years." "Steve and I have met many times over the years and he's a brilliant, original talent," added Miller. "His ability to find human truths in Hollywood stories is a gift. We're excited about the film that we're going to make." You can read the official announcement statement from the filmmaking duo below. "George and I are on the edge of our seats with excitement about this project. It's one of the smartest, hardest working and most original minds in American film making and we're honored to have him working on this script with us. It's going to be a blast." -Steve Zaillian, Oscar-winning screenwriter of Schindler's List
