The point is not that human beings are not or cannot be rational agents. The point is that as rational agents, human beings need to put in order any factors that may have distorted their minds, so as to be able to evaluate their actual rational activity in a critical fashion. To do that, we need to get out of Kantianism, since at its best, Kantianism is a kind of apologetic, designed to save a rationalistic teleology by making the very idea of an ordered exercise of reason seem as foreign as possible to human beings, as something we ought not try to do. It's important to get Kant out of the way, to acknowledge that human beings, by and large, engage in an exercise of reason and that, moreover, we are not just rational agents,
